

FORUM THEATRE

Forum theatre allows an incident or event to be seen from different points of view, making it a very useful strategy for examining alternative ideas.

A small group acts out a scene while the rest of the class watch them. The class work as directors of the group in role, e.g. asking them to act or speak in a different way, suggesting that a character might behave differently, questioning the characters in role, or suggesting an alternative interpretation for what is happening.